WHY STUDY COMMUNICATION?

Ever wonder why some messages persuade while others fall flat? Or how social media, relationships, and culture shape the way we communicate?

Courses in the Communication Department help students understand the why behind communication and media — giving insights into how people interact, how different kinds of media influence society, and how messages create meaning.

WHAT WE OFFER?

We offer fun and interesting entry-level courses, perfect for new undergraduates! Many of these courses apply towards College and University requirements:

- COMM 10. Introduction to Communication
- COMM 20. Analysis of Media Forms and Cultures
- COMM 30. Digital Media Literacy
- COMM 40. Introduction to Promotional Communication
- COMM 50. Presenting and Public Speaking

We offer two majors and one minor:

- Communication Major: Provides a theoretical and historical understanding of how lived experiences, technology, and media shape society. Hands-on learning includes design, media production, fieldwork, and community engagement.
- Media Industries & Communication Major: Focuses on media literacy, institutional analysis, and practical skills. Courses demystify the media industries and provide students with long-term tools for designing more accountable and inclusive media and communication systems.
- Communication Minor: Offers students skills in speaking & presenting, critical writing, analysis, and research.

WHERE CAN A COMM DEGREE TAKE YOU?

We equip students with essential skills to navigate a dynamic job market, adapt to evolving media technologies, and thrive in diverse communication fields. Our program fosters media literacy and prepares future leaders in media, technology, and culture.
